

HOL

- Ye Latian dames, if any here
Hold your unhappy queen Amata dear!
The orgies and nocturnal rites prepare. Dryden's Æn.
5. To have any station.
The star bids the shepherd fold;
Now the top of heav'n doth hold. Milton.
And now the strand, and now the plain they held;
Their ardent eyes with bloody streaks were fill'd. Dryden.
Observe the youth who first appears in fight,
And holds the nearest station to the light. Dryden's Æn.
How pleasant and joyful a thing is it to have a light held us forth from heaven to guide our steps. Cheyne's Phil. Princ.
6. To possess; to enjoy.
Holding Corioli in the name of Rome,
Even like a fawning greyhound in the leash,
To let him slip at will. Shakespeare's Coriolanus.
The cattle, helden by a garrison of Germans, he commanded to be besieged. Knolles's History of the Turks.
Assuredly it is more shame for a man to lose that which he holdeth, than to fail in getting that which he never had. Hayw.
7. To possess in subordination.
The duke was willing to yield himself unto Solyman as his vassal, and of him to hold his feignory for a yearly tribute. Knolles's History of the Turks.
8. To suspend; to refrain.
Death! what do'st? O hold thy blow!
What thou do'st, thou do'st not know. Craspaw.
9. To stop; to refrain.
We cannot hold mortality's strong hand. Shak. K. John.
Fell, banning hag! inchantress, hold thy tongue. Shakespeare.
Men in the midst of their own blood, and so furiously assailed, held their hands, contrary to the laws of nature and necessity. Bacon's War with Spain.
When straight the people, by no force compell'd,
Nor longer from their inclination held,
Break forth at once. Waller.
Unless thou find occasion, hold thy tongue;
Thyself or others, careless talk may wrong. Denham.
Hold your laughter, and then divert your fellow-servants. Swift's Directions to the Postman.
10. To fix to any condition.
His gracious promise you might,
As cause had call'd you up, have held him to. Shak. Coriol.
11. To preserve; to keep.
Stay but a little; for my cloud of dignity
Is held from falling with so weak a wind,
That it will quickly drop: my day is dim. Shakespeare. Hen. IV.
12. To confine to a certain state.
The most High then shewed signs for then, and held still the flood, 'till they were pass'd over. 2 Esdr. xiii. 14.
13. To detain.
Him God hath rais'd up, having loosed the pains of death, because it was not possible that he should be holden of it. Acts.
14. To retain; to continue.
These reasons mov'd her star-like husband's heart;
But still he held his purpose to depart. Dryden.
15. To solemnize; to celebrate.
The queen this day here holds her parliament,
But little thinks we shall be of her council. Shakespeare. H. VI.
He held a feast in his house, like the feast of a king. 1 Sa.
16. To offer; to propose.
Christianity came into the world with the greatest simplicity of thought and language, as well as life and manners, holding forth nothing but piety, charity, and humility, with the belief of the Messiah and of his kingdom. Temple.
My account is so far from interfering with Moses, that it holds forth a natural and unforced interpretation of his sense. Woodward's Natural History.
17. To conserve; not to violate.
Her husband heard it, and held his peace. Numb. xxx. 7.
She said, and held her peace: Aeneas went,
Unknowing whom the sacred sibyl meant. Dryden's Æn.
18. To manage; to handle intellectually.
Some in their discourse desire rather commendation of wit, in being able to hold all arguments, than of judgment in discerning what is true. Bacon, Essay 33.
19. To maintain.
Whereupon they also made engines against their engines, and held them battle a long season. 1 Mac. vi. 52.
20. To form; to plan.
The Pharisees went out, and held a counsel against him. Mat. xii. 14.
21. To carry on; to continue.
He came to the land's end, where he holding his course, in a narrow passage towards the West, for the space of divers days, did at length peaceably pass through the straits. Abbot.
22. To hold forth. To offer to exhibit.
Observe the connection of these ideas in the propositions, which those books hold forth and pretend to teach as truths. Locke.
23. To hold in. To refrain; to govern by the bridle.
I have lately fold my nag, and honestly told his greatest

HOL

- fault, which is, that he became such a lover of liberty that I could scarce hold him in. Swift.
24. To hold in. To refrain in general.
These mens hastiness the warier sort of you doth not commend; ye wish they had held themselves longer in, and not so dangerously flown abroad. Hooker, Preface.
25. To hold off. To keep at a distance.
Although 'tis fit that Cassio have his place;
Yet if you please to hold him off a while,
You shall by that perceive him. Shakespeare's Othello.
The object of fight doth strike upon the pupil of the eye directly, without any interception; whereas the cave of the ear doth hold off the found a little from the organ. Bacon.
I am the better acquainted with you for absence, as men are with themselves for affliction: absence does but hold off a friend, to make one see him truly. Pope to Swift.
26. To hold on. To continue; to protract; to push forward.
They took Barbarossa, holding on his courle to Africa, who brought great fear upon the country. Knolles's Hist. of the Turks.
If the obedience challenged were indeed due to these laws, then did our brethren both begin the quarrel and hold it on. Sanderfon's Judgment in one View.
27. To hold out. To extend; to stretch forth.
The king held out to Esther the golden sceptre that was in his hand. Esth. v. 2.
28. To hold out. To offer; to propose.
Fortune holds out these to you, as rewards. Ben. Johnson.
29. To hold out. To continue to do or suffer.
He cannot long hold out these pangs,
Th' incessant care and labour of his mind. Shakespeare. H. IV.
30. To hold up. To raise aloft.
I should remember him: does he not hold up his head, as it were, and strut in his gait? Shakespeare. Merry Wives of Windsor.
The hand of the Almighty visibly held up, and prepared to take vengeance. Locke.
31. To hold up. To sustain; to support.
There is no man at once either excellently good or extremely evil, but grows either as he holds himself up in virtue, or lets himself slide to viciousness. Sidney.
It followeth, that all which they do in this sort proceedeth originally from some such agent as knoweth, appointeth, holdeth up, and actually frameth the same. Hooker, b. i. f. 3.
The time misorder'd doth in common sense
Crowd us, and crush us to this monstrous form,
To hold our safety up. Shakespeare's Henry IV. p. ii.
And so success of mischief shall be born,
And heir from heir shall hold his quarrel up. Shakespeare. H. IV.
Those princes have held up their sovereignty best, which have been sparing in those grants. Davies on Ireland.
We have often made one considerably thick piece of marble take and hold up another, having purposely caused their flat surfaces to be carefully ground and polished. Boyle.
Then do not strike him dead with a denial,
But hold him up in life, and cheer his soul
With the faint glimmering of a doubtful hope. Addison's Cato.
- To hold. v. n.
1. To stand; to be right; to be without exception.
To say that simply an argument, taken from man's authority, doth hold no way, neither affirmatively nor negatively, is hard. Hooker, b. iii. f. 7.
This holdeth not in the sea-coasts, because the vapour of the sea, without showers, doth refresh. Bacon's Natural History.
The lasting of plants is most in those that are largest of body; as oak, elm, and chestnut, and this holdeth in trees;
but in herbs it is often contrary. Bacon's Natural History.
When the religion formerly received is rent by discords, and when the holiness of the professors of religion is decayed, and full of scandal, and withal the times be stupid, ignorant, and barbarous, you may doubt the springing up of a new sect;
if then also there should arise any extravagant and strange spirit, to make himself author thereof; all which points held when Mahomet published his law. Bacon, Essay 59.
Nothing can be of greater use and defence to the mind than the discovering of these colours, shewing in what cases they hold, and in what they deceive. Bacon.
Where outward force constrains, the sentence hold's.
But who constrains me?
So doth he deal with the testimonies of the fathers, let them be never so express against all sorts of prayers and invocations;
they hold only of such a sort of prayer. Stillington.
The reasons given by them against the worship of images, will equally hold against the worship of images amongst Christians. Stillington's Def. of Div. on Rem. Idol.
None of his solutions will hold by mere mechanics. Mor.
This unfeign'd agitation of the minute parts will hold in light and spirituous liquors. Boyle.
It holds in all operative principles whatsoever, but especially in such as relate to morality; in which not to proceed, is certainly to go backward. South's Sermons.
The drift of this figure holds good in all the parts of the creation. L'Estrange.

HOL

- The proverb holds, that to be wise and love,
Is hardly granted to the gods above. Dryden's Fables.
As if th' experiment were made to hold
For base production, and reject the gold.
This remark, I must acknowledge, is not so proper for the colouring as the design; but it will hold for both. Dryden.
Our author offers no reason; and when any body does, we shall see whether it will hold or no. Locke.
The rule holds in land as well as all other commodities. Loc.
This seems to hold in most cases. Addison's Spectator.
The analogy holds good, and precisely keeps to the same properties in the planets and comets. Cheyne.
Sanctorius's experiment of perspiration, being to the other secretion as five to three, does not hold in this country, except in the hottest time of Summer. Arbutnot on Aliments.
In words, as fashions, the same rule will hold;
Alike fantastick, if too new or old. Pope on Criticism.
2. To continue unbroken or unobscured.
Our force by land hath nobly held. Shakespeare.
3. To last; to endure.
We fee, by the peeling of onions, what a holding substance the skin is. Bacon's Natural History.
Never any man was yet so old,
But hop'd his life one Winter more might hold. Denham.
4. To continue.
He did not hold in this mind long. L'Estrange.
5. To refrain.
His dauntless heart would fain have held
From weeping, but his eyes rebell'd. Dryden.
6. To stand up for; to adhere.
Through envy of the devil came death into the world, and they that do hold of his side do find it. Wisd. ii. 24.
They must, if they hold to their principles, agree that things had their production always as now they have. Hale.
When Granada for your uncle held,
You was by us restor'd, and he expell'd. Dryden.
Numbers hold
With the fair freckled king and beard of gold:
So vigorous are his eyes, such rays they call,
So prominent his eagle's beak is plac'd. Dryden's Fables.
7. To be dependent on.
The other two were great princes, though holding of him;
men of giant-like both hugeness and force. Sidney, b. ii.
The mother, if the house holds of our lady, had rather, yea and will, have her son cunning and bold, in making him to live trimly. Alcham's Schoolmaster.
The great barons had not only great numbers of knights, but even petty barons holding under them. Temple.
My crown is absolute, and holds of none. Dryden.
8. To derive right.
'Tis true, from force the noblest title springs;
I therefore hold from that which first made kings. Dryden.
9. To hold forth. To harangue; to speak in publick; to set forth publicly.
A petty conjurer, telling fortunes, held forth in the marketplace. L'Estrange's Fables.
10. To hold in. To refrain one's self.
I am full of the fury of the Lord: I am weary with holding in. Jer. vi. 11.
11. To hold in. To continue in luck.
A duke, playing at hazard, held in a great many hands together. Swift.
12. To hold off. To keep at a distance without closing with others.
These are interests important enough, and yet we must be wheed to consider them; nay, that does not prevail neither, but with a perverse coyness we hold off. Decay of Piety.
13. To hold on. To continue; not to be interrupted.
The trade held on for many years after the bishops became Protestants; and some of their names are still remembered with infamy, on account of enriching their families by such facileious alienations. Swift.
14. To hold on. To proceed.
He held on, however, 'till he was upon the very point of breaking. L'Estrange.
15. To hold out. To last; to endure.
Before those dews that form manna come upon trees in the valleys, they dissipate, and cannot hold out. Bacon's Nat. Hist.
As there are mountebanks for the natural body, so are there mountebanks for the politick body; men that perhaps have been lucky in two or three experiments, but want the grounds of science, and therefore cannot hold out. Bacon's Essays.
Truth, fidelity, and justice, are a sure way of thriving, and will hold out, when all fraudulent arts and devices will fail. Tillotson's Sermons.
By an extremely exact regimen a consumptive person may hold out for years, if the symptoms are not violent. Arbutnot.
16. To hold out. Not to yield; not to be subdued.
The great matter, leaving a sufficient number of soldiers for the keeping of that fort, went with the rest of his company

HOL

- to a place where the Spaniards, fore charged by Achimetes, had much ado to hold out. Knolles's History of the Turks.
You think it strange a person, obsequious to those he loves, should hold out so long against importunity. Boyle.
Nor could the hardest ir'n hold out Against his blows. Hudibras.
I would cry now, my eyes grow womanish;
But yet my heart holds out. Dryden's Spanish Fryar.
The citadel of Milan has held out formerly, after the conquest of the rest of the dutchy. Addison on Italy.
As to the holding out against so many alterations of state, it sometimes proceeds from principles. Collier on Pride.
Pronounce your thoughts: are they still fixt
To hold it out, and fight it to the last?
Or are your hearts subdu'd at length, and wrought
By time and ill success to a submission? Addison's Cato.
17. To hold together. To be joined.
Those old Gothick castles, made at several times, hold together only, as it were, by rags and patches. Dryden's Dunciad.
18. To hold together. To remain in union.
Even outlaws and robbers, who break with all the world besides, must keep faith amongst themselves, or else they cannot hold together. Locke.
19. To hold up. To support himself.
All the wise sayings and advices which philosophers could muster up to this purpose, have helped only to support some few stout and obstinate minds, which, without the assistance of philosophy, could have held up pretty well of themselves. Tillotson, Sermon 5.
20. To hold up. Not to be foul weather.
Though nice and dark the point appear,
Quoth Ralph, it may hold up and clear. Hudibras, p. ii.
21. To hold up. To continue the same speed.
When two start into the world together, the success of the first seems to press upon the reputation of the latter; for why could not he hold up? Collier on Envy.
Hold has the appearance of an interjection; but is the imperative mood. Forbear; stop; be still.
Hold, ho! lieutenant—fir—Montano! Gentlemen,
Have you forgot all sense of place and duty?
The general speaks to you—hold, hold, for shame! Shakespeare.
Hold, hold! are all thy empty wishes such!
A good old woman would have said as much. Dryden's Pers.
Hold. n. f. [from the verb.]
1. The act of seizing; gripe; grasp; seizure.
Those bards, Cæsar writeth, delivered no certain truth of any thing; neither is there any certain hold to be taken of any antiquity which is received by tradition. Spenser on Ireland.
The wits of the multitude are such, that many things they cannot lay hold on at once. Hooker, Dedication.
Uzzah put forth his hand to the ark of God, and took hold of it; for the oxen shook it. 2 Sa. vi. 6.
This is to give him liberty and power:
Rather thou should'st lay hold upon him, fend him
To depriv'd death, and a just punishment. Ben. Jonson's Cato.
Let but them
Find courage to lay hold on this occasion. Milth. Agonistes.
The devil himself, when let loose upon Job, could not transport that patient good man beyond his temper, or make him quit his hold. L'Estrange.
He seiz'd the shining bough with gripping hold,
And rent away with ease the ling'ring gold. Dryden's Æn.
The hand is divided into four fingers bending forwards, and one opposite to them bending backwards, and of greater strength than any of them singly, which we call the thumb, to join with them severally or united, whereby it is fitted to lay hold of objects of any size or quantity. Ray on the Creation.
Yet then, from all my grief, O Lord,
Thy mercy set me free,
Whilst, in the confidence of pray'r,
My soul took hold on thee. Addison's Spectator.
We are strangely backward to lay hold of this fate, this only method of cure. Atterbury's Sermons.
He kept his hold,
Nor lost 'till beauty was decay'd and old,
And love was by possession pall'd and cold. Graville.
2. Something to be held; support.
If a man be upon an high place, without rails or good hold,
he is ready to fall. Bacon's Natural History.
3. Catch; power of seizing or keeping.
The law hath yet another hold on you.
Let it consist with such a man's interest and safety to wrong you, and then it will be impossible you can have any hold upon him, because there is nothing left to give him a check, or to put in the balance against his profit. Swift.
4. Prison; place of custody.
They lay him in hold, because it was not declared what was to be done with him. Hooker, b. iii.
His troop with equal emulation fir'd,
Dryden.
4. Power;